

Manifesto Cantine Lunae

We believe that wine is the union of man and nature. We believe that wine is a living organism, the product of physical actions and subtle interventions that shape its structure and character, in the image of the territory of origin and in keeping with local winemaking traditions. At Lunae we subscribe to this way of doing things, every step of the way, with a commitment to respect and individual relationships.

Listening to nature

We know that each place has its unique “Spirit” according to its own natural habitat. That’s why at Lunae we nourish and cultivate exclusively native-traditional vines. We focus on those vines that most represent our territory (such as Vermentino), and those at risk of extinction (such as Vermentino nero). We listen to the voice of individual “terroirs”. Plots in Liguria in the Colli di Luni: for minor adjustments, for variations in altitude, each with its own nuance and accent, giving us a precise indication of the nature of the wine, respecting the uniqueness of the landscape.

The personal touch

Wine is the product of man’s cooperation with nature. For us, the search for harmony with nature is matched by the search for harmony with those who share our passion for nature, since human intervention directly impacts the winemaking process. At Lunae, in the field and in the cellar, we care about the professionals we work with, including in the distribution process, as we seek to build meaningful relationships. Our professionalism is the product of generations. We believe in the union between knowledge and emotion. Because we know that nothing in nature is certain, that wine is not a chemical formula or a business transaction, but is, instead, the result of collaboration, interpretation and tradition, passed down and matured with experience. A constantly balanced relationship with nature, respect for which is gratitude.

Relations in the cellar... the wine

The wine in the cellar is a living organism. It grows, it transforms, it reveals its character. Year on year, each expression is specific to its harvest. We embrace these variations and apply simple vinification techniques without disrupting the natural essence of the wine with artificial interventions. Because once it’s in the bottle, the wine can live, express its character. A genuine expression of our territory, the Colli di Luni, of Lunae, and of our work. All of this inspires us, every day. The understanding that with beauty also comes quality. That our actions, the love that binds us to this land, cannot be betrayed, compromised or ignored.
